THE BATTLE OF THE BOYNE. An Orange Celebration in New York, and What Came of it.

SPECIAL NOTICES. NEW YORK, July 12.

There was a terrible riot in Elm Park this afternoon. A number of Orangemen were celebrating the battle of the Boyne, and as they passed through Sixty-four-and-a-half street their band played "The Protestant Boy," which seemed to cause a dispute among a number of Irish labor-ers, which culminated in a fight between two or three of their number, and which was the main cause of their attack on the

About three o'clock ed, owing to the abundance of grass, common at the park, and, on arriving within throwing distance, commenced hurling large stones at those within. As they approached, the men and many of the women in the Park shouted "To hell with the Pope!" A scene of the wildest excitement, confusion and ghastliness ensued. Most, if not all, the Orangemen had pistols, as had also some of the attacking party, and in ten minutes no less than one hundred shots were fired.

The fight continued fast and furious at different places for about an hour, during which the laborers, now about three hundred in humber, had two cart loads of wheel-spokes brought to them, to be used as clubs, which were applied most vigorously to any unfortunate Orange skull which came within their reach. Women and children shricked and fainted. Men were shot through the head or had their heads mashed to a jelly. On the hill river and so in the street gangs of laborers were ranged, and on soeing aven, the passengers in which s chance to have an Orange bow or ribbin, on the road narrowly escaped with lives. Four of the Eighth avenue cars were rather badly demolished. The platforms of many of the other cars were covered with blood. As soon as the tele-graph had conveyed the news of the riot to the police headquarters a large force of policemen, held in readiness for the occa-sion, were hurried to the scene, and after no small exertion succeeded in quelling the riot. The number of casualties is not known. Six dead bodies have been found in the park, and at least fifty wounded.
